MEMORANDUM

DATE: January 6, 2004

TO: District School Superintendents

FROM: Jim Horne

SUBJECT: Implementation of Class Size Reduction Requirements/2004 Transfer Calculations, Process and Timelines for Correction of District-Reported Data, and Process and Timelines for District Appeals

On December 17, 2003, a report was provided with district class size averages for 2003-2004 compared to 2003 baseline district class size averages. The report identified district compliance with the required class size reduction for 2003-2004. The memorandum also indicated that additional information would be forthcoming. The additional information was to provide transfer calculations, the process and timelines to correct and update district-reported data used to calculate district class size averages for both the 2003 baseline data and the 2003-2004 district class size averages, and the process and timelines for district appeals. The following provides this additional information.

Transfer Calculations

Beginning in this fiscal year, Section 1003.03(4)(a), F.S., requires a budget modification for any district that did not reduce average class sizes as required by law. The law directs the Department to calculate, for each district that is not in compliance, an amount which is proportionate to the amount of class size reduction not accomplished. The calculation is the amount that will transfer from a district's class size reduction operating categorical to a fixed capital outlay account for class size reduction in the affected district. Attachments 1, 2, and 3 are separate transfer calculations based upon (1) district class size averages (excluding Department of Juvenile Justice (DJJ) educational programs and charter schools); (2) district class size averages for DJJ educational programs; and (3) school class size averages for charter schools. Attachments 4 and 5 are class size averages for DJJ educational programs and charter schools.

A separate memorandum will be forthcoming on the implementation of the accountability for DJJ educational programs and charter schools. Current law does not address the unique issues impacting DJJ educational programs and charter schools. These various and unique issues will need to be addressed by school-specific implementation plans. For the reasons stated below, I don't believe that the mandatory transferring of class size reduction operating funds to a fixed capital outlay account is the best approach to ensure accountability for compliance with the class size reduction amendment.

DJJ Educational Programs

DJJ facilities are not funded or controlled by school districts. Districts are responsible for providing the educational programs within DJJ facilities. Districts receive funds to operate the DJJ educational programs, and the Department of Juvenile Justice receives capital outlay funds for building and maintaining DJJ facilities. Accordingly, all funds for DJJ educational programs should be used for educational operating costs only. Districts should be required to develop an implementation plan, in conjunction with the Department of Juvenile Justice, to correct circumstances that prevent compliance with the class size reduction requirements in DJJ educational programs.

Charter Schools

The unit of accountability for charter schools should not be the district because each charter school is unique, and the progress of a particular charter school can only be measured at the individual school level. As a result, school-level class size averages are calculated for individual charter schools. However, it is not appropriate to impose school-level compliance for charter schools prior to school-level compliance for all other public schools. Until school-level compliance is required for all public schools, charter schools, in conjunction with their sponsors, should be required to develop accountability plans for the use of class size reduction funds and to measure progress toward meeting school-level compliance.

The forthcoming memorandum will provide the implementation policy for DJJ educational programs and charter schools. In the meantime, it is imperative that district-reported data for both DJJ educational programs and charter schools be corrected according to the process and timelines provided in this memorandum. Districts should not submit appeals for DJJ educational programs and charter schools according to the process and timelines provided in this memorandum.

Appeal Process for an Alternate Penalty Assessment

In accordance with the process and timelines section of this memorandum, districts will have an opportunity to correct and update both 2003 baseline data and the 2003-2004 data used to calculate the class size averages that resulted in the three transfer calculations. Once these data are updated, the Department will produce revised transfer calculations of the amount of class size reduction operating funds to be transferred to class size reduction capital outlay accounts. Following this opportunity for districts to correct and update any data-reporting errors, districts may also submit data-reporting appeals based upon particular data-reporting issues.

In addition to district data-reporting appeals, Section 1003.03(4)(a), F.S., provides for a district to submit evidence documenting why the district did not meet the class size reduction requirements despite its appropriate efforts to do so. This appeal (hereafter referred to as non data-reporting appeals) should not be based upon district data-reporting errors but rather on extenuating circumstances that prevented the district from complying despite their appropriate efforts to do so. Such extenuating circumstances might include unexpected student growth, insufficient space, or inability to hire needed teachers. District documentation of these extenuating circumstances will be reviewed by the State Board of Education. Based upon these reviews, I may recommend alternate transfer assessments to the Legislative Budget Commission. The process outlined below will include the development of appeal justifications.
