Committee Comments or Notations:

Approach: Program Organization

Harcourt Health and Fitness is a complete health program offering chapters and lessons that fully develop the areas of Health Literacy, Responsible Health Behaviors, and Advocacy and Promotion of Healthy Living as outlined in Florida's Health Education Standards. For each grade level, twelve chapters offer age-appropriate emphasis in ten content areas that are the same across grade-level. The consistent structure provides continuity and consistency across the grades so that learning builds from grade to grade. The program's easy-to-use organization offers teachers flexibility in the management of instruction, giving them the freedom to select topics that meet district curriculum goals.

Content

Solid, up-to-date information forms the basis of the content, and health skills are presented as a natural outgrowth of the content. The application of skills in each content area forms a natural bridge from the classroom to the real world, helping students make positive health choices. Included in the content are the following:

- Health-Related Information—Clear, accurate, factual health and medical information and concepts presented in an interesting and engaging manner help students build a strong knowledge base. Health content areas include: personal health; consumer and community health; injury prevention and safety; alcohol, tobacco, and other drugs; nutrition; environmental health; family living; individual growth and development; and communicable and chronic diseases.
- Life Skills—Quality activities and opportunities for timely discussions help students learn to reduce risks to their health. Skills and behaviors taught include making decisions, managing stress, communicating, refusing negative influences, setting goals, and resolving conflicts.
- Building Good Character—Meaningful, relevant activities foster character development so that students have positive relationships with others and can make responsible decisions about their health and fitness. Character traits addressed in the program are caring, citizenship, fairness, respect, responsibility, and trustworthiness.
- Consumer Skills—Opportunities to interpret and evaluate the kinds of information presented in the media help students develop the ability to make wise, healthful decisions. Skills taught include analyzing advertisements and other media messages, making buying decisions, and accessing valid health information.

Harcourt Health and Fitness is structured to reinforce and strengthen skills in reading and mathematics while developing health literacy. The program connects the learning of health with reading, writing, and mathematics through the integration of content-area reading skills, writing activities, and applications of math.

Reaching All Learners: Harcourt Health and Fitness is designed to make health literacy accessible to all students. Leveled activities appear at point of use in the Teacher Edition. These activities provide strategies for reinforcing key lesson concepts at three instructional levels: below-level, on-level, and above-level. Strategies for modifying instruction for English language learners are embedded throughout the Teacher Edition. In addition, the program provides strong support for content-area reading. Each chapter focuses on one of six key reading skills that will help students understand the text. In the Student Edition, the focus skill is identified and reinforced throughout the chapter. Each lesson review includes a graphic organizer that reinforces the reading skill with health content. The Teacher Edition includes a Reading Mini-Lesson to help students use the skill effectively. A transparency that supports the Reading Mini-Lesson is also available.

Comprehensive Assessment: Harcourt Health and Fitness provides a comprehensive assessment package offering many assessment options: frequent mini-assessments within each lesson, formal review and tests for each chapter, Performance Assessments with scoring rubrics, Portfolio Assessment, and Student Self-Assessment. This broad array of assessment opportunities enables students to monitor their understanding of health content and application of skills and supports teachers in making sound instructional decisions.

World of Wellness Health Education Series, Nygard, Green and Koonce, 2005/1st

Committee Comments or Notations:

Approach: The World of Wellness Health Education Series teaches elementary health using an approach that meets multiple objectives:

- (1) Promotes "health literacy" by providing students with current, comprehensive health education.
- (2) Not only enables you to meet national and state standards for health education, but also enhances your efforts to meet standards for physical education AND English Language arts.
- (3) Addresses childhood obesity with a strong emphasis on physical activity and nutrition.
- (4) Gives children multicultural connections that are real and relevant throughout the curriculum.

The World of Wellness Health Education Series, or "WOW!," uses a read-to-learn approach. Each lesson is presented in a fun story format that keeps children engaged. It also helps children develop their skills in reading, writing, and other cross-curricular topics. The Teacher's Guides identify not only the (national) health education and physical education standards addressed in each lesson, but also the language arts standards met. A language arts section is incorporated into every lesson.

"WOW!" is conceptually based, not only through its read-to-learn approach and its cross-curricular content, but also in the way it is designed to accommodate multiple learning styles.

"WOW!" is also contextually grounded, meaning that it emphasizes real-world application of concepts, and the content "spirals" through the curriculum-- topics and information are revisited at intervals throughout the series, in different contexts, to reinforce learning and help demonstrate how information is interrelated.

The World of Wellness Health Education Series can also help schools meet the need to provide a coordinated school health program, because it provides content that addresses four key components of the CDC's Coordinated School Health Model: (1) health education, (2) physical education, (3) family and community involvement, and (4) nutrition education and services. The series also provides guidelines for developing a health promotion program for school staff, a fifth component of the Coordinated School Health Model.

"WOW!" also provides optional teaching materials, found in the Teacher's Guides only, for school districts that want to provide more in-depth information about growth and development, body systems, health promotion, disease prevention related to HIV and AIDS, sexuality education, and substance abuse prevention. This allows school districts to tailor lesson content to meet local mandates and needs. No optional materials are included or referenced in any of the student components OR the main lesson content in the Teacher's Guides, and the main lesson content covers each topic thoroughly without touching on potentially controversial topics.
