* To calculate the primary number of tracks needed to transmit data, take the number of records to be transmitted and divide it by the number of records per track (shown in the SPACE Column). The secondary number of tracks should be 10% of the primary.

Note on Space Allocation

For large files, the rule of thumb is 10 megabytes per 12 cylinders. It is suggested to allocate all the space needed in the primary space and provide only a little extra in the secondary space.

For example, 1,061,400 records at 160 bytes each equals 169,824,000 bytes or roughly 170 Mbytes. Using the allocation of 10 Mbytes per 12 cylinders, one would divide 170 Mbytes by 10 and multiply by 12. This results in the need for 204 cylinders.

In this example the following Site commands are needed during the FTP process. Site CYL Site Primary=204 Site Secondary=20
